<alex_cordonnier>

cordonn2@illinois.edu • (937) 564-0234 • alexcordonnier.com

<skills>

- HTML, JavaScript, CSS — experienced
- jQuery — proficient
- Java — proficient
- C — proficient
- PHP — prior experience
- VB.NET/VBA — prior experience

<education>

Bachelor in Computer Science, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign

Class of 2017 (Sophomore) — GPA: 3.55
James Scholar Honors Program

<experience>

Software Engineering Co-op at Midmark: May 2014 – Aug 2014

- Developed initialization & hardware interface code for a new PC board
- Created macros to automatically update SharePoint, saving 7 person-hours per year
- Fixed longstanding bugs and refactored code in USB interface board
- Wrote unit tests and test protocols to verify new software releases
- Wrote documentation for a complex product collaboratively with a subsidiary

E-Marketing Intern at Midmark: May 2013 – May 2014

- Developed HTML5 versions of 3 Flash color selectors, including deep mobile integration
- Developed new color selector from scratch, especially for use at tradeshows
- Developed HTML5 versions of 3 interactive Flash banners for mobile support
- Made media-rich promotional website available offline for sales representatives' tablets

<projects>

DMX-84: programming theater lights from a calculator (Arduino, C/C++)

- Built device to enable graphing calculators to program and run theater & DJ lights
- Project cost $50, compared to $170 for commercial PC equivalent
- Featured on hackaday.com on Aug 3, 2014

Launchpage: a home screen for Google Chrome (HTML, CSS, JS)

- Developed Google Chrome extension that replaces new tab page with a home screen
- Key features: very fast, customizable backgrounds, adaptive color scheme algorithm
- Featured on makeuseof.com on Sep 11, 2013